THE YOUNG WIFE'S LESSON.

'Indeed, Charley, I don't think you ought to expect it of me!'

Clara Arden stood coloring, and evidently annoyed, in the midst of her pretty little drawing-room, while her husband leaned against one of the puffed damask chairs, pulling unconsciously at his long beard.

'It won't be much, Clara,' said he. 'Fenwick is too sensible a fellow to expect any great performance from so young a housekeeper as you are.'

'That's all nonsense!' said Mrs. Arden.

'Yes; but Clara, darling"—

'There's no use wasting any further argument on the question,' said Clara, setting her lips together. 'When you invited him to dinner without consulting me, you made a very great mistake.'

'But what am I to do? I've asked him, and there is no alternative!'

'Yes, there is. Do as other gentlemen do, and invite him to the restaurant—that is, if you must keep this headlong engagement!'

'But I never did such a thing in my life before!' said perplexed Charley.

'And I hope you never will again!' retorted Mrs. Arden, with some acerbity. 'That is, so far as inviting people without any sort of forethought goes!'

The color rose to Charles Arden's cheek.

'Clara,' said he, 'if you had asked a dozen people here, my only thought would be how best to welcome them.'

'You are not a housekeeper,' said Clara, coldly, 'with a sick cook, and everything in disorder.'

'Pshaw!' said Mr. Arden, as he went out, closing the door behind him, with more emphasis than was absolutely necessary.

'Men are so selfish, so inconsiderate!' she said to herself. 'As if I would brave the criticism of Oscar Fenwick, who has dined at Parisian restaurants, and knows half a dozen aristocratic families, where they keep men-cooks, and butlers, and regular dining-room servants. It's quite out of the question, and so Charles may as well understand first as last. If Bridget hadn't been ill with the intermittent fever, I might perhaps, have tried to get up a dainty little dinner; but as it is, no one but a man would expect it of me.'

So Mrs. Arden adjusted her pretty, shining braids of brown hair in the glass, and nestled down in the corner of the sofa, to forget the wearisome trials and vicissitudes of real life in the pages of the morning papers.

It was late in the afternoon when a visitor was announced, with rather startling abruptness, by the red-armed maid-of-all-work, who was trying to supply the vacant place of the disabled Bridget, according to the best of her ability.

'Please, mam, it's Mrs Marley'

Clara started up, half ashamed of being caught in her morning robe so late in the day.

'If it was any one but you, Mrs. Marley,' said she, laughing and blushing, 'I should apologize for my shortcomings. As it is, you are just in time to take off your things and stay to dinner with me. I am alone to-night, and your society will be a real charity.'

'Why, where is your husband?' asked the visitor, in surprise.

'Dining out.'

'Where?'

'I don't know. The fact is, he met an old college friend this morning, and in a burst of inconsiderate hospitality—so like a man, you know—invited him to dinner. Of course, I refused to ratify the invitation. What could I do, with Bridget ill in bed? So I told him he must take his friend to a restaurant, or some such place. He assented with rather a bad grace, I must confess, so here I am alive.'

Mrs. Marley was a pretty, fair-complexioned lady, with hair as white as snow. One of these gentle, helpful, motherly sort of persons, who are invaluable to their friends. She shook her head as she listened to Mrs. Arden's story.

'Don't you think I did right, Clara asked, impulsively. 'Just consider how I am situated!'

'It would have been some trouble and responsibility,' said Mrs. Marley, 'to superintend the preparation of such a meal as you would like to ask your husband's guest to sit down to; but I think I should have advised you to try.'

But why?'

'In the first place, as a compliment to your husband.'

Clara shrugged her shoulders.

'We are old married people now,' said she. 'Only think, it is surely three years since our wedding day—and all this sentimental billing and cooing is worn out.'

'Real sentiment between husband and wife should never wear out,' said Mrs. Marley, mildly. 'Depend upon it, my love, your husband will appreciate any delicate little attention now quite as much as in the days of your engaged life. But this is not all. Let me tell you a little experience of my own. I had a brother once—a very dear brother. He died of delirium tremens.'

'Oh, Mrs. Marley!' Clara Arden placed a sympathetic hand in that of her friend, for she saw that the pretty old lady had grown pale, and trembled.

'Yes, my dear,' went on Mrs. Marley. 'He had a gay, pretty, young wife, who disliked the cares of housekeeping—and it was an understood thing between them that any gentlemen guests whom it fell Clement's lot to entertain should be taken to some hotel or restaurant. Well, my dear, you know how it was. The wine flowed freely—there was no feminine presence to restrain the false idea of good-fellowship. Clement acquired the fatal habit of indiscriminate drinking, and the upshot of it all was, that he filled a drunkard's grave. Perhaps I was uncharitable, but I have always thought that had his wife made her home agreeable to her husband and his guests, things might have ended differently.'

'But, Mrs. Marley,' cried Clara, much shocked, 'this is quite a different thing!'

'I do not say that it is not, Clara. I only want to warn you against the rock on which my poor sister-in-law's life was wrecked. Of what use is all our sad and hardly won experience, if not to caution others a little?'

Clara was silent for a minute or two, and when she spoke again, it was on quite a different topic. Mrs. Marley stayed and dined with her off the cold joint and simple salad, and went home at about eight o'clock.

And then came the long, lonely evening, during which Clara sat by the window, nervously impatient for her husband's return.

'Of course, he is not the sort of man to drink too much,' she told herself, over and over again; 'but—but I am almost sorry I was so obstinate about not asking Mr. Fenwick to dinner. It would not have been so very much trouble, after all, and I think Charley was vexed about it.'

Nine o'clock struck—then ten—then eleven—and Clara sprung up and began pacing the room in her nervousness.

'I wish he would come?' she cried, wringing her hands. 'I wish he would come!'

Just then there was some disturbance in the street; and glad at all hazards to escape from her own harassing thoughts, Clara threw open the window and thrust out her head.

There was a little crowd at the corner of the street, and she could distinctly hear the jeering voices of some of the little street Arabs crying out: 'It's only a drunken man! Hallo, mister, you'll find your hat in the gutter! Can't you tell where you live? Go and ask an officer.'

Clara's head turned cold as ice. Could it be possible? Was this poor, staggering creature, whose uncertain step afforded amusement to a mob of boys, her noble husband? Had he so far forgotten himself and her? And if so, at whose door lay the fault?

Nearer and nearer came the little crowd. Clara drew in her head, and closed the window. She could not bear to have the dreadful probability confirmed. She stopped her ears; she buried her face in the pillows of the sofa.

'Why, Clara, little wife, what's the matter?'

It was Charley's voice—not the maudlin accents of semi-intoxication, but the full, deep tones of the man she felt she could yet honor, as well as love and obey. She looked up with a little hysterical laugh.

'Oh, Charley, I was frightened! A drunken man in the street, you know'—

'Yes, I passed him. A policeman has just walked him off to the station house. So you were frightened, eh?'

Clara's face was radiant as she turned up the low jet of gas.

'I am so glad you have come, Charley,' said she. 'I have had a great many compunctions of conscience this afternoon, because I didn't make Mr. Fenwick welcome to the best I had in the house, instead of sending you off to a restaurant.'

'We went to Lemonde's,' said Charley. 'The dinner was stylish enough, but nothing better than you could have given us at home.'

'And, Charley,' added Clara, softly, 'the next time you invite a friend to dine with you, you may be certain that my welcome will be ready.'

'That's my own dear little Clara,' said Charley. And the hearty satisfaction in his face was a reward for any sacrifice she might be called upon to make. 'A fellow likes to feel, you know, when he meets an old chum, that he has a home to ask him to, and a wife that will meet him with a smile.'

'But I am sorry about Mr. Fenwick.'

'Never mind. He will be in town again one of these days, and then we'll show him what a home made dinner is—eh, Clara?'

And Clara's smile answered him.

She had had her lesson. She was not likely to forget it.

The valley south of the Balkan, through which the Russian Gen. Ghourko lately retreated before the forces of Suleiman, is the centre of the Oriental attar of roses district. Immense fields of rose bushes are grown there in long ridges, like potatoes.

A few days ago a very handsome lady entered a drygoods house and inquired for a "bean." The polite clerk threw himself back and remarked that he was at her service. "Yes but I want a buff, not a green one," was the reply. The young man went on measuring goods immediately.

A FEW MOON-QUERIES.

The recent discovery that the planet Mars is attended by two or three moons is a very important one, as it has enabled astronomers to ascertain the quantity of matter contained in the planet, compared with that of the sun. But, at the same time, it presents a most perplexing question, which has not hitherto been raised, except as it involved in the discussion about a supposed intra Mercurial planet. One of these moons revolves about three times while Mars rotates once on his axis, and the period of the one first discovered is only about one-third more than the time of the planet's rotation. A necessary consequence of Laplace's theory of evolution, as it is generally understood, is, that the satellites, having been thrown off from the planetary mass, cannot move around him in less time than he occupies in turning on his own axis; which is directly disproved by the ascertained fact, as stated. It follows either that the Laplace theory is at fault, or that the minute bodies which now float in space around Mars were not thrown off from his surface, but have been captured by him at some time in the past when they came near enough to him to be twisted out of their former orbits, but not near enough to be attracted to his surface.

So far as we are at present able to infer, the last named supposition is probably correct, and, if this be accepted, another very interesting question arises: 'Where did they come from?' It is not impossible that these satellites were formerly members of that vast host of planetoridal bodies which course around the sun between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. It is, however, at least equally probably that they once traveled around the sun is very prolonged elliptic orbits, like those bodies that come near the earth every now and then, and some of which fall to her surface, while others pass through and beyond our atmosphere. The meteor that passed over Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and other States, on the 21st of December last, could scarcely have made such a grand display unless its diameter were at least equal to that of the smallest satellite of Mars, which is estimated by Watson at two and three-fourths miles. Under certain conditions of direction and velocity relative to the earth, that meteor might have been captured by our planet, and have now played the role of second moon to us. Who will say that we shall not yet put one or more of these fugitives into the orbital harness and beat Mars in the race of moon-catching! Nay, it is not impossible that our present moon herself will assume the role of satellite captor, and astonish us by that hitherto-unheard-of phenomenon—a moon, circling around a moon larger than itself, or rather a system of moons swinging around each other, while both yield equal obedience to the attractive power of our earth.

The eyes of the world are only just being opened to the possibilities of world existence, and it will expect great (and small) revelations to be made in the future by the astronomers who are impudently peering into everything celestial with their telescopes and trying to anatomize that everything with their telescopes. They have got to make these revealments in order to sustain their own reputation, and furnish a raison (for them) d'etre. It is also their bounden duty to leave no stone unturned, and no inch of space unscanned, in the endeavor to sustain the reputation of our globe. She is able to capture and take care of more than one attendant—certainly as well able as Mars—and does not the ability argue for the fact? Who will dicover another moon to our earth; or, better still, the existence of a satellite to our already familiar moon?

THE TERRORS OF TAXATION.

Mr. Slingsby, our assessor and tax collector, holds on, too. He is another model member of our civil force. The principle characteristic of Mr. Slingsby is enthusiasm. He has an idea now that whever a man gets anything new it ought to be taxed, and he is always on hand to perform the service. It had about fifteen feet added to one of my chimneys last spring, and when it was done Slingsby called and assessed it under the head of "Improved Real Estate," and collected two per cent on it. A few days later, while I was standing by the fence Slingsby came up and said:

'Beautiful dog you have there.'

'Yes, its a setter.'

'Indeed! a setter? The tax on setters is two dollars. I'll collect it now while I have it on my mind.'

I settled the obligation, and the next day Slingsby came around again. He opened the conversation with the remark:

'Billy Jones talk me at the grocery store that your terrier had pups.'

'Yes.'

'A large litter?'

'Four.'

'Indeed! Less see; tax is $2; four times two is eight—yes, $8 tax, please. And hurry up, too, if you can, for they have a new batch of kittens over at Baldwin's he got want to ketch old Baldwin before put that w... By the way, when did you 'Yesterday.' ...rock on your new stable?'

'You don't say!

Four times two is eight, hold on, then, the weathercock—is twelve four—on dollars is the amount.' Twelve

'What do you mean by $4 on ... weathercock? I never heard of such a thing.'

'Didn't hey? Why, she comes in under the head of scientific apparatus. She's put up there to tell which way the wind blows, ain't she? Well, that is scientific intelligence, and the apparatus is liable to a tax.'

'Mr. Slingsby, this is the most absurd thing I ever heard of. You might just as well talk of taxing Butterwick's twins.'

'Butter——. You don't mean to say that Butterwick has twins? Why, certainly they are taxable. They come under the head of poll tax,' Three dollars apiece.

I'll go right down there. Glad you mentioned it.'

A day or two afterwards Slingsby called to see me, and he said:

'I've got a case that bothers me like thunder. You know Hough, the tobacconist? Well, he's just bought a wooden Indian to stand in front of his store. Now, I have a strong feeling that I ought to tax that figure, but I don't know where to place it. Could it come in as 'statuary?' Somehow that don't seem exactly the thing. I was going to assess it under the head of 'idols,' but the idiots who got up this law haven't got a word in reference to idols. Think of that, will you? Why, we might have paganism raging all over the country, and we couldn't get a cent out of them. I'd put up that Indian under 'graven images,' only it ain't mentioned either. I supposed I could tax the bundle of wooden cigars in his had as tobacco, but that leaves out the rest of the figure; and he's not liable to poll tax, because he can't even vote. Now, how would it strike if I levied on him as an 'emigrant?' He was made somewhere else than here, and he came here from there; consequently he's a immigrant. That's my view. What do you think of it?'

I advised him to try it upon that plan, and the next morning Slingsby and Mr. Hough had a fight on the pavement in front of the Indian because Mr. Slingsby tried to seize the immigrant for unpaid taxes. Slingsby was taken home and put to bed, and the business of collecting was temporarily suspended. But Slingsby will be around again soon with some new and ingenious ideas that he has thought of during his illness.—Montreal Gazette.

A DOMESTIC SORROW.

'My dear, do you know that I am very unhappy?'

'No, dear, I had not the remotest idea of anything of the kind. You are living in such luxury and ease that I supposed you to be the happiest of mortals.'

'Oh, no, I never think of that, for I am too, too, unhappy.'

'What makes you so unhappy? Do tell me what it is.'

'Well, my dear, if you will know. My husband goes out and stays all night long at the club and—and plays cards. Ain't that dreadful?'

Mrs. Smith gazed at Mrs. Jones very calmly, and placidly, and pityingly, and then remarked:

'My dear Mrs. Jones, I was absolutely frightened—I was alarmed. I shuddered for fear you were about to relate some terrible mystery. You are not half as unhappy as I am.'

'What,' said Mrs. Jones, 'you unhappy, and so admired and caressed by society? What can be the cause of this?'

'Well I'll tell you, my dear. You see, my husband goes out and stays all night and—well, he stays all night and tries to play cards, but can't. Those other fellows beat him every night.'

SHE DIDN'T

At ten o'clock yesterday forenoon a young man, with very white eyes, and a girl of eighteen, with very long curls stood together on the City Hall tower to gaze on the beautiful panorama below. In a minute or two the girl began to feel giddy, and as the sensation increased she cried out.

'Oh, Will! I'm going to faint away!'

What's up!' he shouted, as he put his arm around her.

'Oh, I'm so—so I'm so—' she gasped as she began setting down.

'Here, now, don't you do it!' he bluntly exclaimed, as he held up. I love you like all jewhittaker, and you know it, but I couldn't pick you up and carry you down them winding stairs if I was engaged to the whole family. Brace up now! If you faint I'll run.'

She didn't faint, but it was necessary for him to keep his arm around her for the next fifteen minutes.

FISH AND GAME PROTECTION.

In continuing this important subject, we resume where we left off—the dependence upon a cultivated public sentiment to sustain the enforcement of such laws as may be enacted. It is idle, except upon matters strictly criminal in themselves, to enforce legislation in opposition to public opinion; and the current of that public opinion has long set in the direction of the most unrestricted liberty of individual action. The American people are proud to compare it with perfect freedom in the pursuit of [illegible] which limit the enjoyment of [illegible] apparently a natural and inalienable right. And their pride is a the privilege natural liberty finds among [illegible] no more noble and instinctive outlet for manly impulse than is afforded by the pursuit of game. That liberty has made the Southern people especially, a nation of marksmen, and has prepared them to be, where the occasions demanded, a nation of soldiers. Good policy, if nothing more, would point to the security of all these individual liberties consistent with public good, and consonant to altered conditions. Is is to guide and control those impulses, and to secure to all equal share in the pursuit and use of game and fish that legislative direction is now finding its place upon the statute book of the Southern States.

When we recall the fact, that in the past, fish and game both contributed largely to the comfort of life and adding greatly to the economy of living by a cheap and ready abundance: and when we contrast the present poverty of such resources, a little reflection will satisfy every class of our population that both public and private good are subserved by the enactment and enforcement of general game laws; not laws giving exclusive rights to favored parties or individuals; not laws prohibiting totally the killing or taking certain birds, animals or fish; but laws founded upon the laws of nature, and respecting those laws of our common and bountiful mother providing for the propagation of species and the protection of the helpless young.

The people themselves have feebly reached out in this direction, availing themselves of that power under the law to exclude trespassers upon their lands by the process of posting. But these are individual acts, and they are often invidious and offensive ones. The public must all work together, which they will do, when they learn to think and feel together on this interesting subject.

The legislation of North Carolina has advanced slowly in the desired direction. Yet it has been set in motion; and, as public interest is enkindled, will move more boldly and efficiently. The last Legislature prohibited the exportation of partridges from the State. This was the first general law on this subject. Certain counties procured the passage of laws, prohibiting the shooting of partridges between the first of March and the first of October. Deer are protected in certain seasons. Fish are secured unobstructed passage in certain rivers, and protected from too lavish use in certain bays and estuaries. And the Department of Agriculture is charged with the supervision of all measures for the protection, propagation, and culture of fish in the rivers and other inland waters of the State. Upon this department depends the suggestion of all needed legislation to carry out and protect their undertakings,

And this is the extent to which North Carolina has gone; only a beginning; and yet a beginning.

Virginia in regard to fish has gone about as far. In regard to game, she has gone much farther, her laws being more stringent, and embracing a greater variety of birds. Partridges may not be killed or captured or offered for sale between the first day of February and the first day of November, and trapping and netting are absolutely prohibited for two years beginning March 20th 1877. Pheasants are not to be killed or captured between February 1st and August 1st. Woodcocks are protected. Robins cannot be killed between April 1st and November 1st; and cat birds, the brown thrush, red birds, wrens, wood thrush, blue birds and martins may not be killed at all or their nests destroyed. Wild turkeys may not be killed or captured between the 1st of February and the 1st of November, nor at any time be captured in traps. Mocking birds are protected from death or capture for the space of six years, and the sale of such bird is absolutely prohibited and buyer and seller both subjected to heavy penalties.

The Louisiana game laws, as we learn from the Southern (N. O.) Sportsman, pursue the general line of the Virginia laws with a somewhat wider range, and with somewhat heavier penalties. At present, we can only refer to the Louisiana law to show that another State has aroused to the necessity of action on the question.

We have pursued this subject with sincere desire for the good of the whole people; with the view of securing protection for crops now being left to the mercy of the insect enemy; with a view of restoring or replenishing that stock of food so abundant, so cheap and so nutritious; and, we [illegible] add, with some view of preserving [illegible] perpetuating that source of healthful manly sport, itself the foundation of the healthiest manliness, which [illegible]arelessness or wantonness, or cruelty has so rapidly dried up; not a [illegible]le touched, too, by those influences which find their spring in intercourse with nature and draw their most delighted inspiration from the voices of her feathered worshippers whose glad mission it seems to be to pour out unceasing carols of joyful praise. And we hope we will not have pursued the subject in vain.

THE MEETING OF CONGRESS.

On Monday next, Congress called in Extra Session, will assemble at the National Capital. The moving cause of the call was to provide for deficiency in the Army and Navy appropriation bills, owing to a disagreement of the two Houses at the last session. It will be remembered that a clause was inserted in the bill as it passed the House of Representatives providing that no appropriation should be made including provision for troops quartered in the Southern States for the support of contestants for disputed state administrations. The Senate would not agree to this; the House would not recede; and so the necessity arose for future consideration of the same measures.

We presume the House will still couple its proviso to any similar bill. True, Mr. Hayes has withdrawn all troops from the South; all disputes in relation to the control of contested governments are settled; & the only present use of the army is duty on the Mexican frontier, or the conflicts with Indian tribes. But the principle upon which the demand of the House was made is still impregnable, and as a fundamental principle, it is as well worthy of assertion and defence as when first announced.

Mr. Hayes is all amiability at present. His pleasant words for the South, his really efficient deeds in its favor, might disarm apprehension for the return of past tribulations, did we not remember that with all his fine phrases, Mr. Hayes is still a Republican, and has infinitely more to lose by final severance from his old party affiliations than he has to expect by junction with the Democrats. These are the alternatives before him. If he adopts the latter, he is more readily caught with chaff than we suppose him to be. Even that portion of the press and of the politicians who most loudly applaud his Southern policy, claim to be firm in their faith to the Democratic party. They make no sign of going over to Mr. Hayes. And they have little hope of his coming over to them. They know he is wise enough to remember from examples of which the world's history gives enough, that while men love the treason, they despise the traitor. He must therefore remain a Republican, and he must come to obey Republican discipline.

Now, it is clear that the leaders of that party are far from pleased with the tender handling of the South by Mr. Hayes. It is a rebuke to all past theories and practice, and the efforts of those leaders is, and will be, to bring back the Northern mind to its old and natural way of thinking. A confession of error is one of the hardest things to wring from the human mind; least of all, is error to be admitted by men who pride themselves upon the erection of a system claimed to be fundamentally sound, and who scorn to concede to a violation of it under the lead of one risen to pre-eminence upon their own political ruin or obscurative. The tone of Hoar, of Conklin, of Stanly Matthews, not to mention Blaine, and Butler, and the moribund Morton, points clearly to the future resumption of the most repressive radical policy in its treatment of the South at the earliest practical moment. To those men and to those measures, Mr. Hayes must come at last. They will be more speedily resorted to in proportion to the credulity of Southern Democrats.

We hope therefore, Southern Congressmen will treat all measures like the increase of the army as if the past Southern question was still arrayed against them in all its formidable aspect; remembering that any concessions now will compel them in the future to confront it again, with the mortification of having once more to contend for that which they had once it in their power to control.

The frontier troubles seem destined to bring on war with Mexico. Texas is entitled to protection, and this government has been remiss in giving it. But we would prefer, if war is to come, that it should have been gone into openly and manfully. If a nation is aggrieved by the acts of another its course is plain. To let the countries drift into war by the act of subordinates is a mean effort to shift responsibility. This is precisely what the incursions of Lieut. Bullis into Mexican territory is weakened with. It is the individual act of an officer which the government may or may not endorse. If it is endorsed, then the country gets into a war outside of the proper war making authority. If not endorsed, then Texas is more the victim of the savage than before.

Let war be made if necessary; but it is the right of the people whose blood and treasure must be spent to carry it on, to have something to say in the premises.

Cassius M. Clay, the great Kentucky abolitionist, killed a negro last week who appeared to have laid in wait to murder him. Cassius is not the first of his class who has had his chickens come home to roost.

The Superior Court of Louisiana, before which the members of the Returning Board will be tried, is now in session. Judge Black of Pennsylvania will aid in the prosecution.

Will that Court be able to put Wells and Anderson in their proper places, or will the influence of the administration screen and save them? The incumbent of the Presidential chair puts these men in places of honor and profit while under indictment for a great crime. Are Mr. Hayes' promises of reform worth anything against such a fact?

In the present great famine in India nearly seven hundred thousand people have perished from hunger. The famine still rages, and many thousands more will perish.

The Secretary of the Treasury has declined the proposition to compromise the tobacco suits now in progress at Greensboro. There are 18 cases involving $120,000, all growing out of violations of the Internal Revenue laws.

The Rev. E. T. Baird, ex-Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Education under indictment for embezzlement of funds of the Board, has returned from Canada and surrendered himself to the authorities.

The forgeries of Gilman on sundry Insurance companies, Banks, and Mercantile firms amount to $353,000 on which he realized $247,000. It is believed that he has committed suicide.

Yellow fever still prevails at Fernandina, and has broken out at Port Royal, S. C. The population of the latter is only about fifty whites, and double that number of negroes.

GOOD USE FOR A DIME.

We advise all our readers to forward their address and 10 cents to Orange Judd Co., 245 Broadway, New York, who make a special offer to send for this sum (half price and postage) the number for October 1st, of the American Agriculturist. This splendid number, besides over 50 engravings, contains a great amount of useful, practical, reliable, seasonable information, not only for the Farm and Garden, but for the Household, Children included. Most will get from it hints and suggestions worth ten or twenty times its cost.....Better still, to send $1.60 and receive the paper, postpaid, from now to the end of 1878—that is, all of volume 37, with the rest of this year free. (Two copies for $1.50 each). Nowhere else can one get so much really valuable, paying information for so little money—not 3 cents a week, a sum easily saved or produced extra, which the paper will be sure to help one to do. This Journal is prepared by practical men and women, who know what they talk and write about from actual experience and large observation, and they can and do greatly aid others to profitable planning and working. Many single hints and suggestions each abundantly repay a year's cost. The fearless exposures of quackery and humbugs in every number, are invaluable, and have saved its readers and the country millions of dollars. The departments for the Household and Children are pleasing and instructive. Every number of the paper is beautifully illustrated. In short, the American Agriculturist is full of good things, for every man, woman, and child, in city, village, and country. Take our advice and send $1.60 for 14 months, or at least send a Dime for the half-price specimen now offered, and see it for yourselves.

WAR NEWS.

LONDON, October 4.—The Standard's Bucharest dispatch has the following: The Turks abandoned Kalavach on the approach of the Russians. Around Tirnova fifty refugees are dying daily from typhus fever.

A special dispatch to the Daily News dated Karajal, Wednesday, says a general attack was made on Mukhtar Pasha's whole line this morning. General Melikoff was in command under orders of Grand Duke Michael. The key of Mukhtar's position, which was defended by only one single battalion was annihilated. The Turks tried to recapture this point but were repulsed. The further progress of the Russians are insignificant but hopes are entertained of cutting off Makhtar from Kars. The Russians bivouacked on the conquered position, feeling sure to recommence early to-morrow. About 1,500 Russians were killed and wounded. The Turks were misled by their spies, and only expected to be attacked in their flanks.

A Times Rustchuk special Oct. 3rd says: "A renewed bombardment by the Russian batteries at Giurgevo inflicted enormous damage upon the town of Rustchuk, a great proportion of the houses are in utter ruins; only a few remain entire. The entrenchments however remain intact. The health of the garrison and inhabitants is good. Casualities few.

CONSTANTINOPLE, October 5.—Mukhtar Pasha's dispatches report Wednesday's fighting indecisive. His outposts were driven in and fighting resulted, in which 5,000 Russians were killed and wounded. The Turkish loss is not stated. The Porte in dispatches to its representative abroad claims that Mukhtar gained an overwhelming victory.

RICHMOND, October 3.—Rev. Wallace Duncan of Wofford College, S. C., has been elected President of Randolph Macon College in place of his brother Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan, recently deceased.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Terms of the RECORDER for 1874.
For 1 year. $1·50.
" 6 months. 75.
Payments always in advance.
Job printing done neatly cheaply and promptly.

See fourth page both for Ads and interesting reading matter.

Come Prepared.

Next week is Court week. We want all that is due us for subscription. Many are in arrears; some for a long time. We are not apt to complain, and lots to dun. But we must ask our subscribers to remember that we are mortal, and that we live by our labor. Let every man ease his conscience by "paying the printer."

Our Paper.

We beg to call to the attention of the people of Orange to the fact that the RECORDER has added to its value as a county paper by the publication of the Monthly Statements of the Commissioners. The regular publication of these has long been desired, but only lately adopted. Hencefor ward they will appear regularly. This is a very important matter, and well worth the serious consideration of the Orange people.

Personal.

Capt. James I. Waddell, of Shenandoah fame, and commander of the wrecked steamer city of San Francisco, reached here on Friday last on a brief visit to his old home. He is engaged in a commercial mission promising much of great value to the South, by opening up direct communication between the ports of the gulf and the West Indies, and South America.

Col. Walter Clark and Dr. George W. Graham of Raleigh favored us with a call on Saturday.

See ad. of C. M. Parks. Each time this judicious merchant makes his purchases, he is wise and fortunate enough to strike such happy streaks as to make him the favored child of fortune. Fortunate—for himself, he makes his opportunities the fortune of his purchasers; certainly at no time has a more splendid stock of goods been offered on more favorable terms. Give him early and many call.

See ad. of Dr. George W. Graham. He has been long enough in the practice of his specialities to have confirmed the high estimate formed of his talents and acquirements, and is deserving the large additional share of confidence and patronage which it is one of the objects of his advertisement to ask.

See ad. of Webbs' Warehouse. A fuller notice in our next.

Frost.

The first of the season was observed on Friday morning. It was very light and did no harm. A great deal of tobacco is yet green and uncut, and farmers will be glad at the farther respite that is given them.

The Freshet.

Our streams were suddenly swollen by the heavy rains of Wednesday afternoon and night, and next day were higher than for two or three years past. We hear of no damage done in this county farther than washing away of fences. In the counties below the distruction is greater, bridges and mill dams being swept off, and crops submerged, and we may expect to learn that the loss to the farmers in the Eastern counties is very great.

Diphtheria prevails in the vicinity of Cedar Grove, but we are glad to learn in mild form, and we have no fatal cases to chronicle. This is a blessed exception to its usual calamitous appearance.

A copy of the Hillsboro Recorder, the oldest paper in the State, is on our table. We welcome the Recorder to our exchange list, and hope it will meet with the success in the future it so well merits. It is ably edited, and well conducted in every respect. It is now 57 years old, and soon will enter upon its 58th year. Long live the Recorder.—Randolph Regulator.

University Day.

The laying of the Corner-Stone of the old East will be celebrated on Friday the 12th inst in GIRARD HALL.

Addresses will be delivered by President Battle, Rev. Dr. Phillips, and others, on the early history of the University.

It is expected that distinguished alumni will be in attendance and participate in the exercises.

The public are invited to attend.

Ever since Eve's incautious experience in the Garden of Eden, Babies have been the institution. Petted by men and loved by women, their baby life would be an absolutely happy existence but for those evidences of mortality exhibited in Colic, Flatulency, etc;—all happily relieved at once, however, by the prompt use of Dr Bull's Baby Syrup. Sold everywhere. 25 cents.

General Hampton has been caught by a North Carolina Committee at last. He will certainly speak at the Fair,—probably on Thursday. We hope Judge Buxton may be induced to suspend Court for that day to give all here the opportunity to hear him.

The Fair.

We regret that the Fair comes off during Orange Court week, for there will be a serious conflict between inclination and compulsory duty. Many must be deterred from going who would otherwise esteem themselves fortunate in witnessing probably the most brilliant exhibition that has ever yet been made. We are sure, and that without disparagement to predecessors, that no Secretary has ever worked more laboriously, and so successfully in commanding public attention and enlisting public interest as Captain C. B. Denson. His work has been conducted with unusual intelligence and with an amount of labor almost incredible, but cheefully performed under the inspiration of elevated State pride.

We are not in possession of the Schedule for Fair week, but believe an extra will run daily beginning Tuesday morning, and passing Hillsboro about 8 o'clock a. m.

Tobacco in Caswell.

We attended Caswell Court last week and had an opportunity of seeing much of the crop, and learning much of its condition, in this emphatically tobacco county. After passing Prospect Hill, 14 miles North of Hillsboro, tobacco was almost continually in sight all the way to Yanceyville. A large portion of the crop was still uncut, owing to unusual lateness in ripening. But cutting was going on as rapidly as possible, and the process of curing in full operation. From all we can learn, the crop in Caswell is a very great one in quantity, and a fair one in quality. Planters generally do not admit that they have made fine "cures;" still it is unquestionable that there will be a large proportion of very fine tobacco made. The experience of the Caswell planter is that of a life time. The fearfully worn out lands along Hyco and Country Line Creeks attest how long tobacco has been the staple of this section. If the weed can be made bright and beautiful, the Caswell, and the Person man for that matter, is able to bring out its best qualities.

We incline to the opinion that this crop, besides being the largest for years, will also have the largest proportion of fine tobacco.

About three fifths of the crop had been cut last week. The approach of frost will hasten the cutting of the rest, and that may compel the cutting of much that will never be cured well.

A Bad Shot, or a Cool Negro.

We heard of an altercation in Caswell the other day which illustrates either the one or the other of the positions of our caption. Two partners in a transaction, a white man and a negro, fell out about the settlement of their days business, and from high words, fell to blows. The white drew a knife and made a dash at the negro. The latter interposed a chair, and kept off his assailant. The latter, furious at being balked, drew a pistol, and opened fire on the negro. The latter possibly knew that the white man was a bad shot, and coolly stood, and received four succession shots, at a distance of not more than six paces. But after the fourth discharge, the negro waxed impatient at being made a target of and exclaimed. "I tell you what it is, boss, ef you don't quit a-shootin at me, I'll bust your head wid a brick." The head was not "busted," and we infer the last shot was not fired.

Serious Affair at Durham.

Mr Zach Lyon jr, brought up from Durham on Saturday's freight train a negro, David Brooks, arrested for the probable fatal cutting of Bryan Lunn and the severe wounding of Stephen Street, both colored, which occurred on that day about one o'clock. Mr. Lyon informs us that the parties were engaged in some game of chance when high words arose, the lie was passed, a blow given to Brooks by Lunn, when Brooks drew a knife and made a ghastly wound across the right breast of Lunn. Street interposed, and he was also severely cut. The assailant immediately took to flight, and ran nearly half a mile, but was knocked down finally by Mr. Lyon, secured, and brought here, when he was at once committed to jail.

Lunn's wounds are supposed to be mortal. He was a well known negro politician, and was prominent in his exception to the usual affiliations of his race.

National Hotel, Raleigh.

Col. C. S. Brown, the genial and excellent landlord of the National offers very superior inducements to visitors during the Fair week. The table is always good. The Colonel promises during the week, it shall not be equalled in the City, a full supply of fresh oysters and fresh fish regaling his guests every day. He makes his meal hours to suit the public convenience, breakfast being from 7 o'clock to 10; dinner from 2, to 5, and supper from 6 to 8. Board $2,50 a day, single meals 75 cents and lodging the same.

This house, deservedly popular, deserves all the good words at our command and we hope will receive its full share of prtronage during the Fair as well as at all other times.

Wilmington Democrat.

We welcome the appearance of this new weekly which made its appearance last week under the charge of J. N. Stallings, late editor of the Magnolia Record. The DEMOCRAT is in fact a continuance of the latter by change of location. It is one of those journals which may be safely embraced in the friendly and pleasant notice by the Wilmington STAR of the country press. The RECORD has brain and culture and we are glad to see the able editor seek a wider field for his able pen.

STATEMENT OF THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF ORANGE COUNTY.

For the Month of October 1877.

Fred Clark was relieved from paying Poll Tax for the year 1877 on account of disability.

J. S. Mangum was granted license to retail spirits at Bragtown in Orange County for 6 months.

It was ordered that the Treasurer pay H. A. Woods one hundred dollars for repairs on the ford over Little River on the Jamison Road.

Wm. C. Miner offered his bond as Constable of Bingham Township with his sureties. Said Bond was approved, and was ordered to be registered.

The Board met on Monday the 1st inst, all the members of the Board being present.

In connection with the subject of claims on the School fund, the Board passed the following orders:

It is ordered by the Board of Education that all orders on the county of three years standing or less shall be paid by the County Treasurer out of any School funds in his hands due said District. The oldest claims having the preeminence (provided therefore that if said Treasurer shall pay any junior claim not knowing of the older one the Teachers receipt shall be a proper voucher for him in every case.

Is further ordered that no contract in the future made by the School Committee shall be paid beyond the funds already apportioned for that year.

Caswell Court.

Owing to the engagement of the farmers in cutting and curing tobacco, there was a smaller attendance at Court than ever remembered. There was little to do however, and people were more profitably employed at home. The criminal docket was light. One old negro, 72 years of age, was convicted of larceny but judgment was suspended, owing to age and a previous good character. The civil docket was altogether unimportant. Judge Buxton presided to the satisfaction of everybody.

At another time we propose to refer to Caswell, and its recent history. At present, we have not the room for so interesting and voluminous a subject.

Disorderly.

Sam Richardson, colored, was arrested on Friday for violent conduct on the streets, cursing uproariously and insulting persons without provocation. He was arrested and taken to the Mayor's Office, but behaved so outrageously that a trial of his case could not be had, and he was ordered to jail. He was taken in charge by the Town Constable and another and was dragged to jail resisting violently at every step, making strenuous efforts to assault the officer, and making the streets ring with his rage. He was finally thrown down and tied, and in that way conducted to his quarters. It appeared afterwards that previous to his arrest, he had assaulted Mr. Fletcher Parks in his room with deadly purpose, breaking his collar bone, and inflicting other injuries. Sam will have a hard road to travel.

Bound For Greenwood.

Capt. S. S. Kirkland, so well and favorably known to our people as an Engineer of distinguished ability, and as a courteous and genial gentleman, has accepted the position of Chief Engineer of the Greenwood and Augusta Railroad, and will enter upon his duties as soon as he returns from a visit to North Carolina. Capt. Kirkland will be assisted by Mr. William Walton, late of the Spartanburg and Union Railroad, a young engineer of unusual promise and capacity, who has already gone on Greenwood. We regret to loose the society of such pleasant gentlemen, but congratulate the Greenwood people upon their success in securing such valuable services, hoping that the Spartanburg and Augusta Railroad, whereever it may run, may eventually be placed in Capt. Kirkland's charge.—Carolina Spartan.

THE SEASON OF INTERMITTENTS.

All miasmatic complaints, in other words, all disorders generated by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every section subject to the visitation of fever and ague, or other forms of intermittent disease, the causes which produce these maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome condition of the atmosphere by a course of tonic and alterative treatment. Foremost among the invigorants, recommended by time and experience as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epidemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. By a timely use of the Bitters, the feeblest resident of a unhealthy soil may escape the sickness which, without the aid of this potent ally of nature, will be apt to overtake the strongest.

HOW IT IS DONE.

The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich"; the second, how to regain good health. The first can be obtained by energy, honesty and saving; the second, (good health) by using GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER. Should you be a despondent sufferer from any of the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, &c; such as Sick Headache Palpitation of the Heart, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dizziness of the Head, Nervous Prostration, Low Spirits, &c; you need not suffer another day. Two doses of AUGUST FLOWER will relieve you at once. Sample Bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Positively sold by all first-class Druggists in the U. S.

For sale by Dr. O. Hooker Hillsboro, and Stephen A. White Mebanesville.

Hillsboro holds her own.

During the brilliant but superficial prosperity of other places of rapid growth, the offspring of speculations, Hillsboro has quietly settled down to solid and substantial operations. She holds her own like few places in this commonwealth. She can say, she stands where she did one hundred and twenty four years ago.

We must now all pull together, take the tide that is coming in at its flood, and come to the top.

Like an avalanche, the fall trade struck us thirty days ago. Unprecedented crops all over the country; several years of mercantile economy and close sailing; the settlement of the Southern troubles; gold at par—all combined—have produced the present flood in business. In the meanwhile, thousands of factories North, choked with surplus stock, and unable to borrow more money, are unloading at ruinous prices for cash, making frightful sacrifices to raise means to avert impending ruin. Having little money and some brains to go into the market to buy these goods, enables us to quote prices that smash competition into dust.

We want to see, as usual, the surrounding counties in to examine our stock. It is a fact conceded by all, that Hillsboro, since the war has been one of the best markets in the state to buy goods.

WE HAVE THEM.

LIME AS A MANURE

Lime is applied to the soil in two forms, namely—in that of carbonate or mild lime, and as caustic or quick lime. * * * *

There are some who foolishly think that lime is good only while it is quick. True the decomposition of vegetable or animal substances is greatly hastened. When quick lime is applied it does speedily decompose animal or vegetable matter. Carbonate of lime or air slackened lime does also produce the same effects only in a slower degree, and its action is not so immediately apparent as that of quick or caustic lime. Lime may be applied at different periods in the rotation. It may be spread on grass land previous to the same being broken up for cropping. It may also be laid on in the course of preparing the land for green crops, or after there removal, or previous to plowing for succeeding crops. When plowed in, it ought to be by a shallow furrow. Lime is an invaluable material for top-dressing pastures which require renovation. The proper quantity of lime to be used depends on the nature of the soil. Strong clay lands require an allowance which would ruin lighter soils, and those soils to which lime is applied for the first time, will require more than they will do at an after period. In general the quantities given are from 200 to 300 bushels per statute acre for heavy clays, and for medium soils from 120 to 180 bushels per statute acre, and from 70 to 80 bushels per statute acre for very light and moory soils.—Purdons' Practical Farmer.

HOG CHOLERA.

A distinguished physician, who has been for months investigating the causes of hog cholera, with a view of arriving at the best curative agents therefor, has discovered that the corpuscles of the blood in hogs which have died of the so-called cholera are pierced by a very minute microscopic mite or insect, permitting the serum to ooze out and leave the fibrous portions. There are no such conditions in the healthy blood. The lesion which causes death in the hog is located sometimes upon one organ and then upon another, just as the animal has chanced to get the insect placed; if breathed through the air, the lesion is in the lungs, or in the portion of the brain most easily approached. If the insects are eaten with the food, then the stomach, liver or intestines are involved; but always the blood corpuscles are pierced by myriads of these microscopic insects, with fatal results. The remedy evidently is something that will destroy these insects which infest the blood in countless numbers. The best remedy, if this theory of its cause is correct, will be coal cinders, coal oil, turpentine and sulphur. Should these remedial agents have the desired effect, the above discovery will prove of vast importance to hog raisers throughout the country.—Field and Farm.

TO RESTORE WORN LAND.

By actual experience I find that plowing in green crops and a well regulated rotation of crops is the surest and cheapest way to improve worn out land, always taking care when sowing any kind of crops, whether small grain, peas or clover, to plow the land deep. It is not expected that a farmer will take his whole farm through this process at one time, but he may use the best of it for corn or cotton, while he improves a part of it, and change it about, so that in a few years he may improve it all. All land cultivated in corn should be sowed in peas at the last plowing of the corn. No land should be cultivated in cotton more than one year without changing to another crop.

If a loaded revolver were placed at my head and I was given one minute in which to name the most useful piece of four-legged furniture, I should unhesitatingly answer—The cow, and have 45 seconds to spare. In speaking of the cow I embrace also the ox and the pull. The ox is used on the farm in place of a steam engine. He is faithful as a box of pills, and somewhat slower than lightning. A man who has driven an ox team all his life is selected as a pall bearer at funeral, as he never gets ahead of the procession. The bull is chiefly celebrated for his disposition, which is cut goring, and gathered in quite full. He generally wears an ear-ring in his nose, and has curiosity to know how you are made inside.—Ex.

—If the farmer persists in selling off his crops, or anything that is made from his crops, as beef, pork, butter, cheese, the soil must be constantly growing poorer in inorganic elements, unless fertilizers outside the farm are procured and substituted for the elements removed, for when we sell any product of the farm we sell a part of the soil, not enough, perhaps, in a single pound or ton of anything to sensibly diminish the quantity left, but enough that the aggregate in a few years may render the field and farm barren. It is like an individual picking his own pocket for the sake of getting money to spend.

A market gardener had a very fine cow that was milked week after week by two hired men. He observed that the amount of butter he carried to market weighed about a pound more on each alternate week. He watched the men and tried the cow after they had finished milking, but always found that there was no milk left in the teats. He finally asked the Scotch girl, who took care of the milk, if she could account for the difference. "Why, yes," she says, "when Jim milks he says to the old cow, 'so, my pretty little muley, so;' but when Sam milks he hits her on the hip with the edge of the pail, and says, 'hi t, you old brute.'"—Sacramento Record.

A stable is not complete unless (1) the animals may be safely fastened in a way not uncomfortable to them; (2) unless the animals can be kept dry and clean; (3) unless it is light, and (4) unless air can pass through without coming in contact with the occupants and without soiling shoes and clothing—four important requisites, not expensive, but within the the reach of every one who builds a stable.—Detroit Tribune.

A correspondent of the Hughesville Enterprise says that now is the time to cut short the crops of catterpillars which infest orchards. The nest, which at a distance resembles a limb or twig will be found to contain thousands of cells full of eggs.

Be careful to examine every week or ten days the roosts of your chicken house, and if anything be found in the way of vermin, give them a washing of naptha or kerosene. The former is the most effective in destroying vermin.

TUTT'S PILLS

A Noted Divine says

They are worth their weight in gold.

READ WHAT HE SAYS:

DR. TUTT:—Dear Sir: For ten years I have been a martyr to Dyspepsia, Constipation, and Piles. Last spring your pills were recommended to me; I used them (but with little faith). I am now a well man, have good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, piles gone, and I have gained forty pounds solid flesh. They are worth their weight in gold.

Imparting health and strength to the system. Sold everywhere. Office, 35 Murray Street, New York.

Dr. Tutt has been engaged in the practice of medicine thirty years, and for a long time was demonstrator of anatomy in the Medical College of Georgia, hence persons using his Pills have the guarantee that they are prepared on scientific principles, and are free from all quackery.

He has succeeded in combining in them the heretofore antagonistic qualities of a strengthening, purgative, and purifying tonic.

Their first apparent effect is to increase the appetite by causing the food to properly assimilate. Thus the system is nourished, and by their tonic action on the digestive organs, regular and healthy evacuations are produced.

The rapidity with which persons take on flesh, while under the influence of these pills, of itself indicates their adaptability to nourish the body, and hence their efficacy in curing nervous debility, melancholy, dyspepsia, wasting of the muscles, sluggishness of the liver, chronic constipation, and kindred complaints. Sold everywhere. Price 25 cents. Office, 35 Murray Street, New York.

Entering at once into the blood, expelling all scrofulous, syphilitic, and rheumatic affections. Alone, it it a searching alterative, but when combined with Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, and other herbs, it forms

Dr. Tutt's Sarsaparilla and Queen's Delight,

The most powerful blood purifier known to medical science for the cure of old ulcers, diseased joints, foul discharges from the ears and nostrils, abscesses, skin diseases, dropsy, kidney complaint, evil effects of secret practices, disordered liver and spleen. Its use strengthens the nervous system, imparts a fair complexion, and builds up the body with

HEALTHY, SOLID FLESH.

As an antidote to syphilitic poison it is strongly recommended. Hundreds of cases of the worst type have been radically cured by it. Being purely vegetable its continued use will do no harm. The best time to take it is during the summer and fall; and instead of debility, headache, fever and ague, you will enjoy robust health. Sold by all druggists. Price, $1.00. Office, 35 Murray Street, New York.

THE SUN.

1877. NEW YORK. 1877.

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 28 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom, and integrity for hollow pretence imbecility, and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes, enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete, and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate, and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

The price of the daily SUN will be 55 a month or $6.50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7.70 a year. The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1.20 a year, post paid. The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.

The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for THE WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and every such person sending us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER.

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation, which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR-DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicines.
Price One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye.

FOR THE WHISKERS.

It is easily applied, and produces a color which will neither rub nor wash off. Sold by all Druggists. Price Fifty Cents.
